2016 Annual Meeting

Welcome to the 2016 APD Annual Meeting

On behalf of the APD Program Committee and Board of Directors, I welcome you to the 2016 APD Annual Meeting! APD members are leaders in changing times and the Annual Meeting provides the opportunity to engage in conversations regarding all aspects of academic medicine/dermatology.

This year's meeting will be special in many regards but what will stand out will be the presentation of the Third Annual APD Lowell Goldsmith Named Lectureship, presented by Dr. Joseph Fins. Dr. Fin's presentation titled, "Daniel Patrick Moynihan and the Defense of Academic Medicine: From the Clinton Plan to Obamacare", is one you don't want to miss.

The 2016 Annual Meeting will kick off Friday morning with presentations related to faculty development. The first Plenary Session will focus on diversity in medicine and dermatology, a most important topic for all of us. Friday afternoon's presentations include a session on resident education, an update from the ACGME, the Dermatology Teachers Exchange Group (DTEG) session and the Dermatologic Surgeons program. Saturday's notable events include lectures by Anne L. Housholder, MD, MPH; Lionel Bercovitch, MD; and Jane Grant-Kels, MD, all presenting on ethical issues facing dermatologists.

In addition to the program outlined above, there will be many other important, exciting and useful presentations. Dr. Carrie Kovarik, from the University of Pennsylvania will speak on "Trends in Teledermatology," Dr. Jack Resneck, from the University of California, San Francisco will speak on "Trends in Health Insurance," and Dr. Mark Lebwohl, from the Icahn School of Medicine at Mount Sinai will discuss the "Rising Costs of Medications."

Whether you are a Chair, Program Director, Faculty member or Administrator in a Dermatology Department or Division, the 2016 APD Annual Meeting will provide you with the information you need to lead in academic dermatology. Each session has been thoughtfully organized to present you with tools and ideas that can be implemented and shared at your institution. I am sure the 2016 APD Annual Meeting will leave you revitalized and recommitted to the growth of academic dermatology and ready to address the challenges facing our training and educational programs.

Welcome to Chicago and the 2016 APD Annual Meeting!
